The Pelagics

Many eons beyond counting, before the Ancestor was born, before the Manor was built on the hill, even before the Hamlet was founded, a race of abhorrent creatures with half-fish half-human features called this land their home. Remnants of their civilization can be found littered around the Estate for those who know where to look. But the crown jewel of this ancient empire was a vast underground metropolis underneath the very hill where the Manor now stands. However, this ruined city is not abandoned.

There is much speculation and theory about these nightmares: some believe that they are the old founders of the ancient city; others believe they were created by the original inhabitants; some others believe they were once human and transformed into these cold, emotionless terros of the deep. The latter theory may hold some truth, as the Pelagics are known to kidnap humans for nefarious ends.

VARIANT: PELAGIC CREATURE TYPES

You can feel free to change the creature types of the Pelagic Grouper, Pelagic Guardian, and Pelagic Shaman to Aberration or Humanoid (Pelagic). I simply chose the Monstrosity creature type to represent a bit of lore describing a human being turned into a Pelagic after being bitten by one.

PELAGIC GUARDIAN

Hit Points 30 (4d10 + 8)

Guard. The Pelagic Guardian chooses one ally within 5 feet of itself. Until the beginning of the Pelagic Guardian's next turn any attack that targets the chosen ally has disadvantage as long as the Pelagic Guardian is within 5 feet of the chosen ally.

REACTIONS

Protect. When an enemy within 5 feet of the Pelagic Guardian attacks an ally under the effect of the Pelagic Guardian's Guard, the Pelagic Guardian uses its reaction to attack the enemy with its Cestus.
